

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

DOMES-DAY BOOK,

With a view to promote its being Printed.

Read at a Meeting of the SOCIETY, 18 December, 1755.

IN the Chapter-house at Westminster, in the receipt of the king's Exchequer, are preserved two volumes in manuscript called DOMES-DAY, which, without question, are the most ancient and most venerable records that now exist in this or any other kingdom. Mr. Selden, in his preface to Eadmerus, p. 4. speaking of DOMES-DAY, says, Neque puto alibi in orbe Christiano actorum publicorum autographa, quorum faltem ratio aliqua habenda est, extare, quae non saeculis aliquot hisce cedunt.

This work (as the Red book of the Exchequer informs us) was begun in the year of our Lord 1080, and was completed in the year 1086, as appears from the concurrent testimony of ancient writers, and from an entry written at the end of the second volume in a large coeval hand in capitals, in the words following :

“ ANNO MILLESIMO OCTOGESIMO SEXTO AB INCARNATIONE
“ DOMINI, VIGESIMO VERO REGNI WILLI, FACTA EST ISTA
“ DESCRIPTIO, NON SOLUM PER HOS TRES COMITATUS, SED
“ ETIAM PER ALIOS.”

2 ACCOUNT OF SOME PARTICULARS.

In this work, which contains a general survey of the greatest part of England, are set forth, under their particular counties, rapes, laths, and hundreds, an account of the cities, towns, vills, etc. in each county; how much arable land, pasture, meadow, and wood every man had; the extent or value of them in the time of Edward the Confessor and at the making the survey; how many men and of what condition, each town, etc. contained, with many other particulars hereafter expressed.

Towards the beginning of each county there is a catalogue of the capital lords or great land-holders, who possessed any thing in it: beginning with the king, and then naming the great lords, according to their rank and dignity.

The first volume (which is a large folio finely written on 382 double pages of vellum, in a small but plain character, and in double columns on each page) contains the description of thirty one counties by name in the following order.

CONCERNING DOMES-DAY BOOK. 3

The other volume (which is in quarto, is written on 450 double pages of vellum in single columns, and in a large, but very fair, character) contains the counties of,

Essex,	fo. 1.
Norfolk,	fo. 109.
Suffolk,	fo. 281. to the end.

Part of the county of Rutland is included in that of Northampton, and part of Lancashire in the counties of York and Chester.

Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmorland, and Durham are not comprehended in this survey.

The occasion of making this survey, its antiquity and authority, will best appear from the following passages, transcribed from records and our best historians.

The author of the Dialogus de Scaccario, who wrote in the time of Hen. II. book I. cap. xvi. gives this account of it.

Speaking Of William the conqueror -- " Demum ne quid deesse videatur ad omnem totius providentiae summam, communicato confilio, discretissimos a latere suo destinavit viros per regnum in circuitu. Ab his itaque totius terrae descriptio diligens facta est, tam in nemoribus, quam pascuis et pratis, nec non et agriculturis, et verbis communibus annotata, in librum redacta est; ut videlicet quilibet jure suo contentus, alienum non usurpet impune. Fit autem descriptio per comitatus, per centuriatas, et hydas: praenotato in ipso capite regis nomine, et deinde seriatim aliorum procerum nominibus appositis, secundum status sui dignitatem, qui videlicet de rege tenent in capite. Apponuntur autem singulis numeri secundum ordinem sic dispositis, per quos inferius in ipsa libri serie, quae ad eos pertinent, facilius occurruunt. Hic liber ab indigenis DOMES-DEI nuncupatur, id est, dies judicii, per metaphoram. Sicut enim districti et terribilis examinis illius novissimi sententia, nulla tergiversationis arte valet eludi: sic cum orta fuit in regno contentio de his rebus quae illic annotantur; cum ventum fuerit ad librum, sententia ejus infatuari non potest, vel impune declinari. The Saxon chronicle, published by bishop Gibson, expresses the occasion and manner of making this survey in the following words.

“ Post haec, tenuit rex magnum concilium, et graves sermones habuit
 “ cum suis proceribus de hâc terrâ, quo modo incoleretur, et a qui-

 “ terrarum ejus archiepiscopi haberent, et dioecesani episcopi, ac ejus

Ingulphus abbot of Croyland, a contemporary author, gives this account of it : “ Totam terram descripsit, nec erat hida in tota Anglia, quin

In the escheat rolls of Ed. III, the occasion and manner of making this survey and its authority are declared (almost in the very words of the author of the Dialogus de Scaccario, before quoted) to be, “ ut “ quilibet jure suo contentus, alienum non usurpet impune; praeno-

 Escaet. 30 Ed. III, Essex cited by Spelman, title DOMES-DAY.

The annals of Waverley give this account of it, — Misit rex Willielmus justitiarios suos per unamquamque scyram, id est, provinciam Angliae, et inquirere fecit per jusjurandum quot hidae, id est, jugera uni aратro sufficientia per annum, essent in unaquaque villa, et quot animalia: hinc autem fecit inquiri quid unaquaque urbs, castellum, vicus, villa, flumen, palus, silva, reddit per annum; haec autem omnia in chartis scripta delata sunt ad regem, et in thesauros reposita usque hodie servantur — Rex tenuit curiam suam in natali apud Gloucestre, ad Pascha apud Wintoniam, ad Pentecostem apud Londoniam: — deinde accipiens hominium omnium terrariorum Angliae cujuscunque feodi essent, juramentum fidelitatis recipere non distulit (d).

A very learned judge, now living, in his discourse concerning tenures, gives his opinion of the occasion of making this survey, in the following words: “ It is very remarkable that Will. I, about the 20th year of his reign, just when the general survey of England called Domes-

6 ACCOUNT OF SOME PARTICULARS

“ day book is supposed to be finished, and not till then, summoned
“ all the great men and landholders in the kingdom, to London and “ Salisbury, to do their homage and swear their fealty to him ; by “ doing whereof the Saxon chronicler supposes, that at that time, the “ proceres, et omnes praedia tenuentes, fe illi subdidere, ejusque facti
“ sunt vasalli. So that we may reasonably suppose, First, that this gene“ ral homage and fealty was done at this time (nineteen or twenty years
“ after the accession of William I,) in consequence of something
“ new, or else that engagements so important to the maintenance and “ security of a new establishment had been required long before ;
“ and if so, it is probable that tenures were then new, inasmuch as “ homage and fealty were and still are mere feudal engagements,
“ binding the homager to all the duties and observances of a feudal “ tenant.

“ Secondly, That as this general homage and fealty was done about
“ the time that Domes-day book was finished, and not before, we may “ suppose, That that survey was taken upon or soon after our ancestors
“ consent to tenures, in order to discover the quantity of every man's fee,
“ and to fix his homage. This supposition is the more probable, because “ it is not likely that a work of this nature was undertaken without “ some immediate reason, and no better reason can be assigned why it
“ was undertaken at this time, or indeed why this survey should be “ taken at all, there being at that time extant a general survey of the “ whole kingdom made by Alfred (d).”

Will. I, appears to have considered the finishing this Survey, as an event of great importance, and probably intended to have made the completing it the commencement of a new aera, a charter granted by him soon after to the abbot and church of Westminster, of eight hydes of land in Piriford in Surrey, having this remarkable date, Post descriptionem totius Angliae (e).

As ingenious as this conjecture is, there is a passage in Inqulphus <sup>et</sup> makes the Tenures prior in time to this Survey, et 1085 Rex Solidariorum universorum per monasteria
totius regni dimisit, moratus maxime per illa Banobis
qua de Militia non exhibenda sua dominia tenebant de rege.

The authority of DOMES-DAY in point of tenure, hath never been permitted to be called in question; for instance, when it hath been necessary to distinguish, whether lands were held in ancient demesne or in what other manner, recourse hath always been had to Domes-day book, and to that only, to determine the doubt. If lands were set down in that book under the title of terra regis, or if it was said there, rex habet such land, or such a town, it was then determined to be the king's ancient demesne. If the land or town was therein set down under the name of a private lord or subject, then it was determined to have been at the time of the survey the land of such private person, and not ancient demesne.

The tallages formerly assessed upon the king's tenants in ancient demesne, were usually greater than the tallages upon persons in the counties at large; and therefore when persons were wrongfully tallaged with those in ancient demesne, it was usual for them to petition the crown to be tallaged with the community of the county at large: upon this the king's writ issued to the barons of the Exchequer to acquit the party aggrieved of such tallage, in case, upon search of Domes-day book, the barons found the lands were not in ancient demesne (f).

The care originally taken for the preservation of this survey, the same as was taken of the king's seal, is an additional proof, of the consequence and importance this record was deemed to be of to the publick.

The Dialogus de Scaccario says, " Liber ille [Domes-day] sigilli regis comes est individuus in thesauro (g)." 14 d for each one transmited

Until of late years it has been kept under three different locks and keys, one in the custody of the treasurer, and the others of the two chamberlains of the Exchequer, and was not to be opened but on paying a fee of 6*s.* 8*d.* It is now deposited in the chapter house at Westminster, among other valuable records in the custody of Mr. Morley, whose readiness to oblige the members of this society with the inspection of this, and other records in his office, without fee or reward, it would be want of candour not to mention.

The writing of this MS. after near seven hundred years, is perfectly legible. And in Hickes's Thesaurus, vol. i. p. 144, and in some other books, specimens are to be seen of the character in which it is written.

In page 122. of the preface to a Collection of discourses of several learned English antiquaries (who were early members of this society) Mr. Hearne, after inserting a table of the abbreviations used in this record, adds, " he hath often wished this record were printed entirely, " there being no survey of any other country whatever equal to it. " The ancient Roman itineraries have been always valued, and that deservedly. Yet they are trifles in comparison of this most admirable survey, done with such an exactness, and so much diligence, as would be hardly credible, were it not certain that the Normans resolved to make the best use of their conquest, and to secure every inch of ground to themselves. There are accounts of some whole counties printed from this book, and they are very good specimens of the intire work, and cannot but make those that are in love with our antiquities, the more earnestly to desire all of it (b)."

I sincerely concur with Mr. Hearne in this desire; and with a view to excite the lovers of antiquity to undertake the publishing this valuable record, I have taken the liberty to point out to the society such of the many helps and assistances I at present recollect, either in print or manuscript, which, I imagine, will lessen the expence, and greatly facilitate the completing so laudable and desireable an undertaking; not doubting but other members of this society, of which there are numbers more equal to the task, will, by their communications, render what is here attempted, more useful and perfect.

Bishop Nicholson, in his preface to the second edition of his English historical library, published in 1714. says, there was then in the Harleian library copies of DOMES-DAY, the Liber Rubeus et Niger of the Exchequer.

Dr. Gale, in his appendix to the Scriptores Hist. Anglicanae, vol. iii. p. 795. says, Sir John Trevor had an accurate transcript of DOMES-DAY book, which copy the Doctor had made use of. This is now in the hands of Mr. Arthur Trevor.

CONCERNING DOMES-DAY BOOK. 9

The Lord Somers, it has been said, was at the expence of having DOMES-DAY copied, and properly attested; but what is become of this copy, or whether it is now in being, is not known. It must however be admitted, that this inestimable remain of antiquity, with regard at least to its public use and authenticity, runs every hour the risk of being irretrievably lost, should a fire happen in the neighbourhood of the Chapter-house, as formerly happened in the Cottonian library, to which accident that part of the Chapter house where it is kept, is by its situation much more liable.

In the king's Remembrancers office in the Exchequer, there is a manuscript called DOMES-DAY; but this is only an epitome or abridgment, and not a copy of the original in the Chapter-house (i.)

A copy of one of the returns or inquisitions, from which DOMES-DAY Book was compiled, is still extant.

In an ancient M.S. which Mr. Selden calls Breviarium villarum et fundorum, quorum proprietarii erant antistes et sodales Elienses, written in a character as ancient as that of DOMES-DAY Book, and which Dr. Gale calls the Liber Eliensis, there is a Copy of the Inquisition, for part of Cambridgshire, and the isle of Ely, with this title:

“ Hic subscrbitur inquisitio terrarum, quomodo barones regis inquisiverunt: Videlicet per sacramentum vicecomitis scirae, et omnium baronum, et eorum francigenarum, et totius centuriatus, presbyteri, praepositi;  $\overline{VI}$  villanorum uniuscujusque villae. Deinde quomodo vocatur mansio, quis tenuit eam tempore Regis Edwardi, quis modo tenet, quot hidae, quot carucatae in dominio, quot homines, quot villani, quot cottarii, quot servi, quot liberi homines, quot sochemanii, quantum silvae, quantum prati, quot pascuorum, quot molendini, quot piscinae, quantum est additum vel ablatum, quantum valebat totum simul, et quantum modò, quantum ibi quisque liber homo vel sochermanus habuit vel habet. Hoc totum,

(i) In the Cotton Library, Julius C. I. 1. and Faustina XI. 2, are copies of this abridgement, and there is a like Abridgement preserved in the Tally Court in the Exchequer.

“ tripliciter; scilicet tempore Regis Edwardi, et quando Rex Wil-
“ helmus dedit, et quomodo sit modo, et si potest plus haberi, quam “ habeatur.

The names of the jury in each hundred, are expressed after this manner.—“ In Trepeſlau hundredo juraverunt homines, scilicet Ra“ dulfus praepositus hujus hundredi, Willemus de Caleio, Radulfus

“ Godriz de Fulmere, Alvuricus de Trepeſlau, Sigar Dapifer, et om-
“ nes alii Franci et Angli de hundredo juraverunt (k).”

Some of the Particulars the jury were charged to inquire of, were thought unnecessary to be inserted in the two volumes, framed out of the Returns; which will account for the different descriptions different writers give of the contents of this survey, some of them saying, it contained an account of every particular the jury were charged to enquire of, and others, more correctly, confining it to such things only, as were extracted from the returns, and transcribed into the work in question.

In the Cotton library, Vitellius C. viii. 13. there is a MS. written on 14 membranes of vellum, on one side only; which is thus described in the catalogue —“ Pars libri censualis vocati DOMES-DAY, conti“ nens descriptionem Cantii. Charactere antiquo et temporibus Regis
“ W. I. competente.

Mr. Casley, in the Appendix to the catalogue of the MSS. in the king's library, plate 15, hath given a short specimen of the character of this MS. and p. 358 he says, this is one of the rolls out of which probably Dooms-day was made.

At the bottom of the first page of this MS. there is the following note, written in a modern character, through which a line is drawn,
“ Pars L. DOMES-DAY. N.B. in scaccario liber ille DOMES-DAY, “ partem, jam olim deperditi; quae hic habentur, in libro DOMES-DAY majori in folio conservantur.

But upon a careful perusal of this MS. and comparing it with DOMES-DAY, it appears,

That the hand writing is more modern, than that of either of the volumes of DOMES-DAY, and probably not older than the reign of Henry II. and that

It is a verbatim copy of great part of DOMES-DAY, for the county of Kent, transcribed so literally, that in two or more places, the marginal references are, by the mistake of the copier, transcribed and incorporated into the text; and instead of its being one of those rolls, out of which, as Mr. Casley fancies, DOMES-DAY was made, or of being a fragment of an original volume of DOMES-DAY, the rest of which is now lost: it is clearly one of those rolls or copies from DOMES-DAY, which it was usual in ancient times for great lords and others, to have made for their private use, and in which, only particular parts, and not the whole county were transcribed. What there is in this MS. is a very exact copy of parts of the survey, but many paragraphs in most of the chapters are entirely and ex professo omitted.

Dr. Gale gives this account of these kind of rolls—“ *Ex his duobus voluminibus solebant regni proceres suas possessiones excerpere; et quae sparsum disiectae per varias regni partes disseminabantur in unum ordine comportare. Archiepiscopus Cantuariensis suos tenentes hinc collegit, sed in rotulo descripsit; quod fecisse eum conjicio, ante quam hi duo codices extarent. Abbatiae fere omnes suos redditus hinc desumpsere, et in libros digesserunt. Croylandensis, Elyensis, Wigorniensis liber in hoc genere adhuc servantur. Comites idem factarunt; vidimus comitum Richmundiae et Norfolciae terrarum ex DOMES-DAY descriptiones. Hinc etiam ortum suum habuit liber ille Feodorum militum, quanquam, tractu temporis, ex novis inquisitionibus multum diversus evasit (c).*

(c) Script. Angl. vol. iii. app. p. 795.

Parts of DOMES-DAY already printed.

In the appendix to Dr. Brady's introduction, p. 1. et sequent. there is printed a list of all the great landholders taken from DOMES-DAY.

In the appendix to the 3d vol. of Dr. Gale's Scriptores Hist. Anglicanae, Page 759 to 778. the Jura et Consuetudines Anglo-Saxonicae, in each county are printed from DOMES-DAY.

In the Registrum Honoris de Richmond, a Transcript of what relates to that honour, which in DOMES-DAY makes part of Yorkshire, is printed p. 1. to p. 20.

In the appendix to Morton's Natural History of Northamptonshire, p. 1. to p. 46. there is printed a transcript of such part of DOMES-DAY, as relates to that County.

In Sir Henry Chauncey's antiquities of Hertfordshire, there is a transcript of DOMES-DAY for that county, with a translation thereof into English.

In Sir Peter Leicester's History of Cheshire, there is printed a transcript of what concerns that county.

In Hemingi Chartularium, published by Mr. Hearne, there is printed a transcript of what relates to the church of Worcester.

Mr. Morant, in his antiquities of Colchester, hath printed a transcript of so much of DOMES-DAY as relates to that borough.

And in the Descriptions of some few other counties transcripts or translations of such parts of DOMESDAY, as relate to those particular counties, are also printed.

It is proper, however, to remind the Society, that many of these printed transcripts are faulty, and that all of them will require to be minutely compared, and carefully re-examined with the original.

Parts of DOMES-DAY in manuscript in public or private hands.

The number of manuscript copies of separate or detached counties or parts of DOMES-DAY in publick or private collections is considerable; such of them as are come to my knowledge, are mentioned in the following list, which is, with the greatest deference, submitted to the perusal and consideration of the Society, not as a work in any manner perfect, but as capable of being greatly enlarged and corrected by every individual member of this learned body.

A list of such transcripts or copies of parts of DOMES-DAY, as now are, or lately were, in the following collections.

It is probable some of the MSS. copies of DOMES-DAY, mentioned in the foregoing List, are mislaid, and not now to be met with in the collections above referred to; and that others of them, which in the catalogues are called copies, may, on perusal, appear to be only abstracts, or abridgments: and it is equally probable, that many other copies of the whole, or parts of this valuable work, not mentioned in the preceding list, will appear to be in other collections.

Mr. Agard, in his preface to the obsolete words in DOMES-DAY, mentioned in the preceding page, assigns an additional reason for the Conqueror's making this survey—“Conquestor sub ipso suo ingressu “ regnum hoc, annuo tributo (Danegelt vocatum) taxatum invenit;
“ —pro quo colligendo, Rex Ethelredus totum regnum in hidis
“ divisit, quarum singulae sex solidos persolvere tenentur — Cum
“ vero Rex Willielmus illud aliquando majoris, aliquando minoris “ emolumenti esse in comperto habuisset, optimum esse duxit, ut in “ quisitio per totum regnum haberetur, qua dignosceret, quantum “ singula oppida, villa, et hamletta numerare tenerentur; et ut in “ libro DOMES-DAY scriberetur his verbis, pro V Solinis, Hidis, vel Ca-
“ rucatis se defendit, quod aequa valet ac si diceret, pro tot Solinis, “ Hidis, vel Carucatis Danegelt persolvit.

The author of the notes to the Register of original writs, p. 14. b. says DOMES-DAY was made in the time of Edward the Confessor; and that all the lands which were in the hands of Edward the Confessor, at the time that book was made, are ancient demesne, and that the lands which were then in any other hand are frank-free. His words are,

“ Seint E. all temps que le liure fuit fait sount auncien demene, et “ les terres que furent adonques en auter main sount frank fee.”

There is a Nota Bene to the same purport in the Natura Brevium.

Fitzherbert hath adopted this mistake, by transcribing the whole sentence, with a small variation, into his New Natura Brevium, p. 16. b.

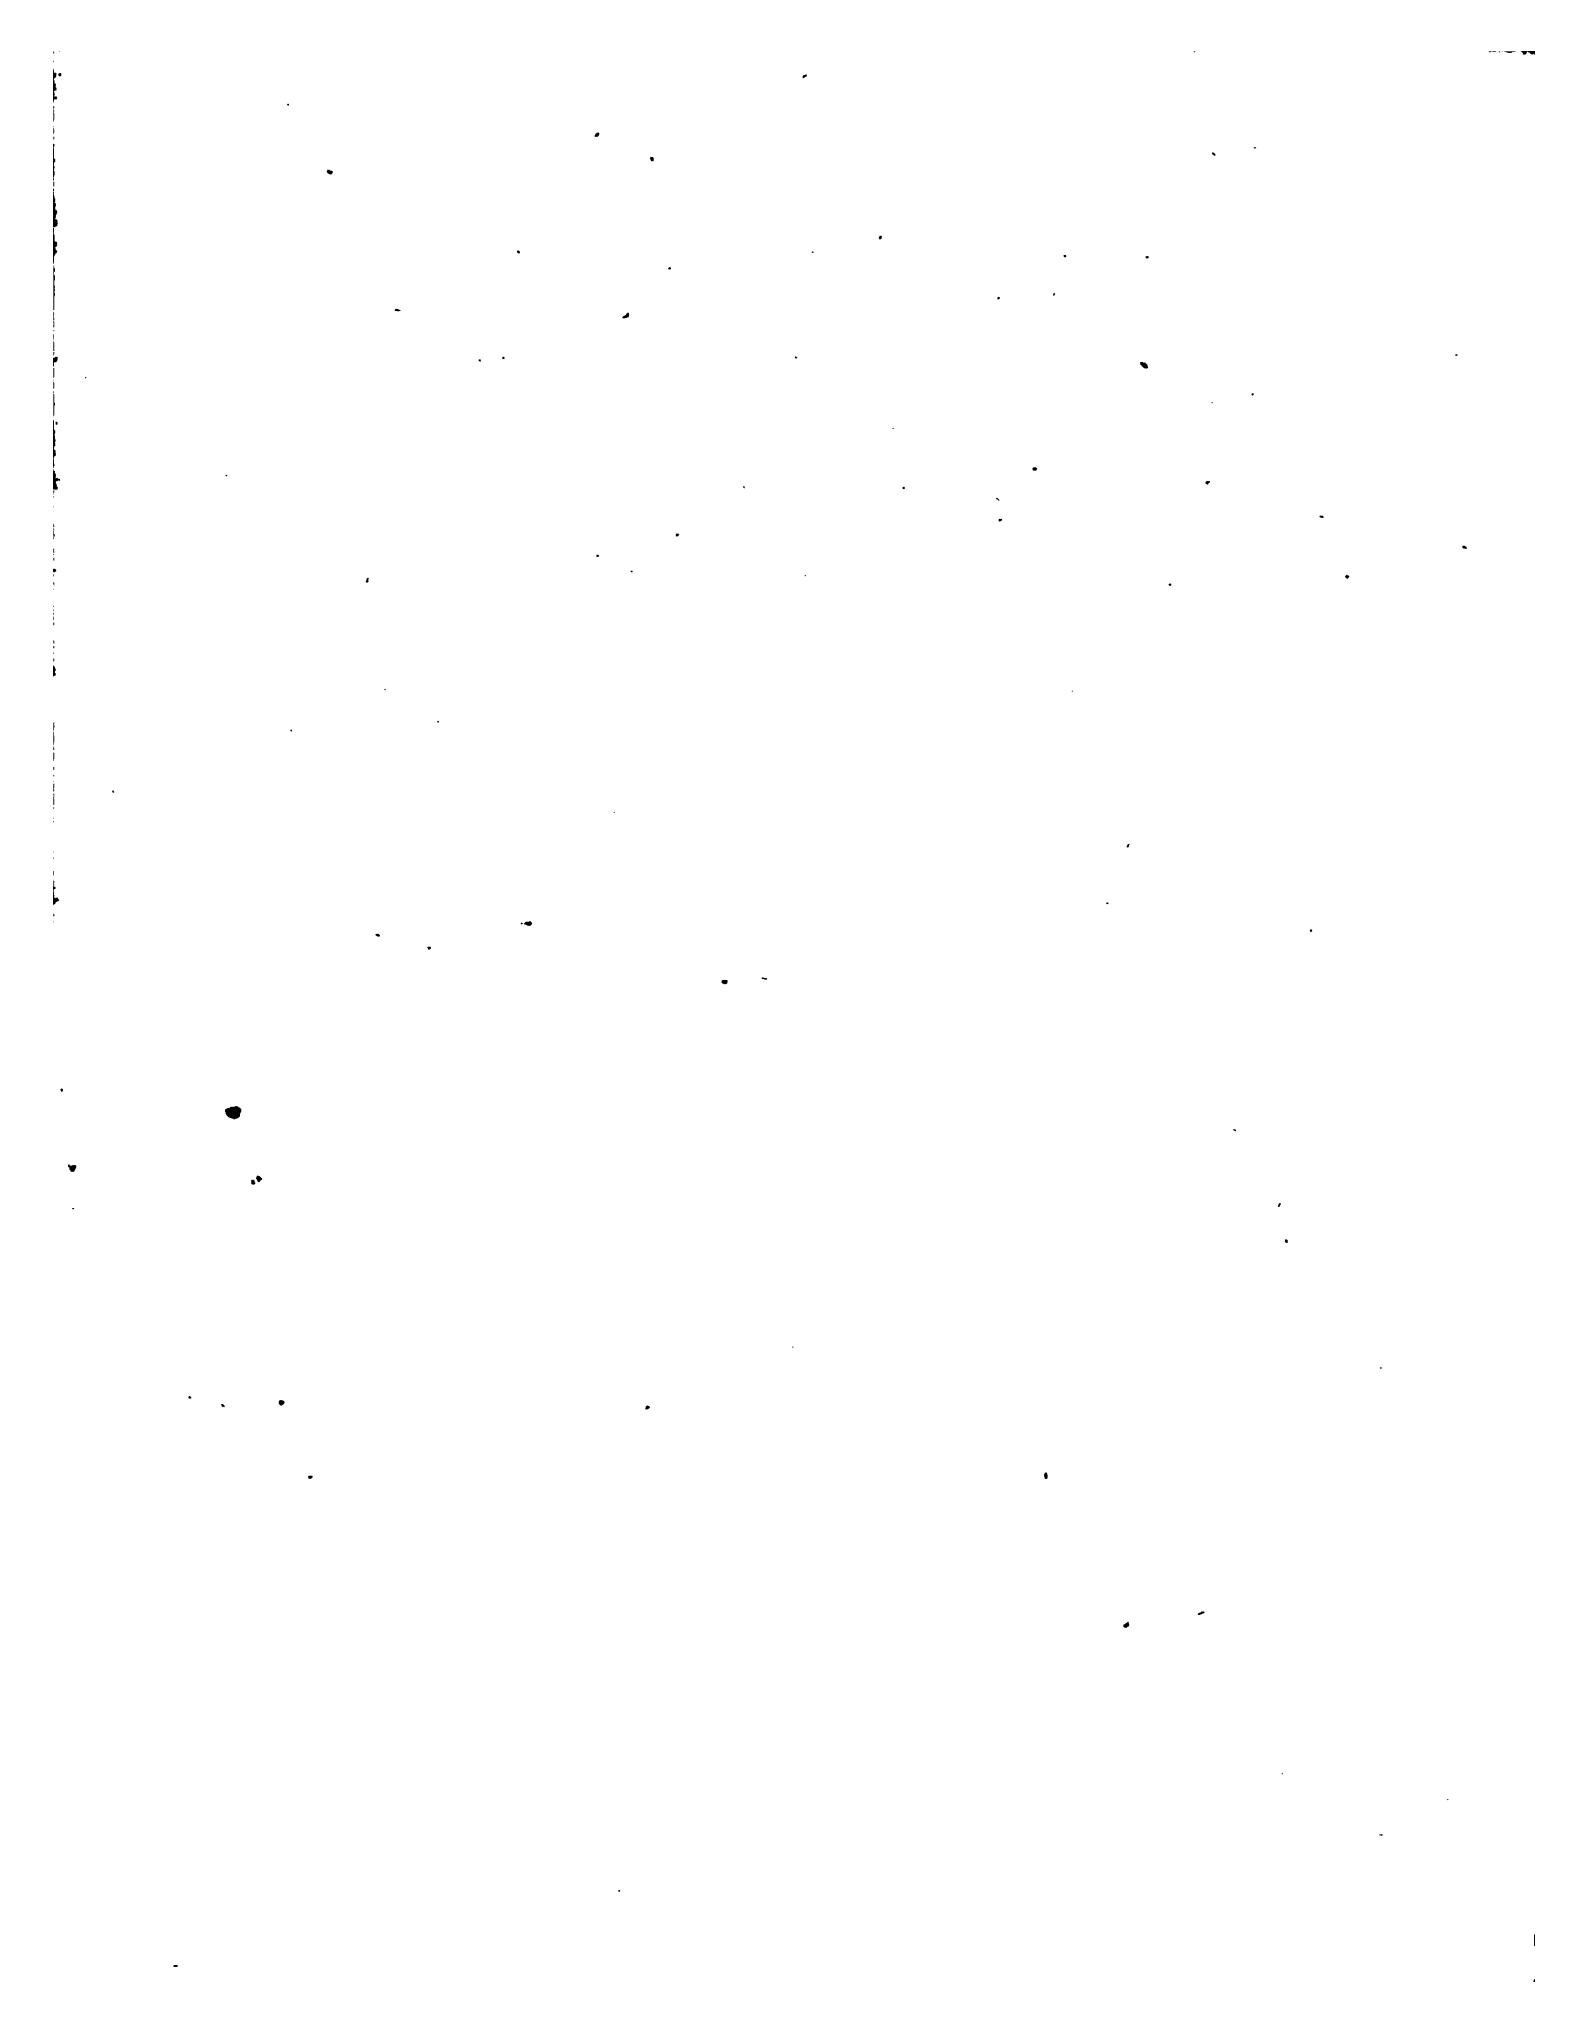

I am sensible how much I have trespassed on the time and attention of the Society, by this very long paper; but if it shall, in the smallest degree contribute to induce the lovers of British Antiquities to undertake the printing DOMES-DAY Book, I shall not despair of their forgiveness.

S I R,

IT is now near two Years, since the Society of Antiquaries of London printed at the Request, and for the Use of its Members, A short Account of some Particulars concerning Domesday Book, with a view to promote its being published.

In this Account, besides many interesting and curious Particulars, which well deserve the Attention of the Antiquary, the learned Author has, with great Industry, collected and pointed out several Helps and Assurances from Transcripts and printed Copies of sundry Parts of that venerable Record come to his Knowledge, which will greatly contribute to lessen the Expence of, and facilitate the compleating that laudable Undertaking; hoping from the extended and collective Enquiries of other worthy Members, whose Opportunities and Means of Information might be greater, to supply and reform what was therein wanting.

THE kind Assistance of its Members in a Measure so conducive to this great Design, and which had received the Sanction of their Approbation, the Society could not doubt of; and therefore having allowed sufficient Time, they apprehend, for finishing all necessary Enquiries on that Head, they now think of collecting and bringing into the common Stock the Issues of their joint Labours and Researches.

FOR this Purpose I am directed, by an Order of this Day, to acquaint you, That it is their Request, that you will be pleased to communicate to them, by the first Thursday in February next, an Account of such Transcripts, printed Copies of, or Extracts from any Parts of Domesday Book as are come to your Knowledge; expressing therein where, or in whose Hands, the same are now deposited; with such further Particulars as you shall judge material towards promoting and accomplishing the Publication of that noble Record, which the Society have much at Heart, and from which they hope to reap no less Emolument than Honour.

I am, with great Respect and Esteem,

S I R,

Your most obedient humble Servant,
